

Offering Reconciliation

How Do I Think About Reconciliation When People Are Being Killed?

Creating Reconciliation in the Midst of Ongoing Violence and Pain

Approaches from South Africa,
Northern Ireland, and Other Conflicts

Panelists

Jeremy Sarkin, Visiting Professor of Law, Tufts University

Mari Fitzduff, Professor Of Coexistence, Brandeis University

Moderator

Maria Green, Assistant Professor, Human Rights and Development, Heller School

Wednesday, March 28

12:30 to 2:00 p.m.

Gardner Jackson Room

Mezzanine, Goldfarb Library

Brandeis University

Refreshments Available

Join Jeremy Sarkin, visiting professor of law at Tufts University, former anti-apartheid activist in his native South Africa, and coauthor of Reconciliation in Divided Societies: Finding Common Ground (University of Pennsylvania Press, 2007), and Mari Fitzduff, professor of coexistence, director of the master's program in coexistence and conflict at Brandeis and internationally recognized mediator whose work began with the conflict in her own Northern Ireland, for a discussion of how ordinary people have addressed reconciliation even during the worst times of chronic conflicts. What challenges have they encountered, what processes have they found their way to, and what impacts have their reconciliation efforts had on eventual peace in their communities?