

The Lurie Institute for Disability Policy

Dedicated to improving the lives of disabled people across the lifespan

Research & Policy Analysis

Our researchers use quantitative and qualitative methods to explore the needs, experiences, and priorities of the disability community. We address issues such as health and healthcare, poverty and discrimination, parenting and pregnancy, and community living and supports.

Education & Mentorship

Our disability policy fellowships and mentorships support the next generation of researchers, scholars, advocates, and policymakers. We offer fellowship opportunities at multiple levels, including annual undergraduate and master's fellowships along with doctoral and postdoctoral fellowships. In addition, we offer our unique Carrie Buck Distinguished Fellowship for community advocates.

Community Engagement

We support an active schedule of webinars, presentations, public events, trainings, and community outreach. Our findings and other resources, including our new Disability Data Dashboards, are available in a wide variety of accessible formats, and our community engagement recognizes and highlights the integral contribution our community partners and advisory board members make to our research process.
