The National Research Center for Parents with Disabilities is a cross-disability initiative guided by the ethos of the disability community, “nothing about us without us.” Through services, research, and advocacy, the Center provides information and support for parents with disabilities and their families. The Center is part of the Lurie Institute for Disability Policy at Brandeis University, and is supported by the National Institute for Disability, Independent Living and Rehabilitation Research.
History

• Institutionalization, sterilization, and marriage restrictions (Braddock & Parish, 2001)

Today

• Increasingly, people with disabilities are becoming parents (NCD, 2012)
• Prevalence estimates range from 5% to 10% (Kaye, 2012; Li, Parish, Mitra, & Nicholson, 2016; Sonik, Parish, Mitra, & Nicholson, 2018)
Who are Parents with Disabilities and Their Children?

Estimates vary:

• 4.1 million parents (6.2%) with reported disabilities in the United States have children under age 18 (Kaye, 2012)
• Estimates indicate 6.1 million (10%) children in the U.S. have parents with disabilities (Kaye, 2012)
• 2.9 million parents in the United States have a disability (Li, et al., 2016)
• 10.3% of parents in the United States have a disability (Sonik, et al., 2018)
• 2.7 million parents (3.8%) have a serious mental illness, 12.8 million (18.2%) have some type of mental illness (Stambaugh et al., 2016)
• Removal rates of parents with intellectual or psychiatric disabilities are as high as 70-80% (NCD, 2012)
• Extremely high removal rates and loss of parental rights for parents with sensory or physical disabilities
• 19% of children in foster care have a parent with a disability; parents with disabilities have 22% higher odds of TPR (DeZelar & Lightfoot, 2018)
• Cases with disabled parents are more likely to be substantiated and less likely to receive family preservation or reunification services compared to nondisabled parents (Lightfoot & DeZelar, 2016)
